

Victoria Park to host St Helens Armed Forces Day event

St Helens Borough will pay tribute to the local Armed Forces community this June at a special event in Victoria Park.

Members of the public, community groups and families are invited to come along to the borough's green flag award-winning park in Windle for St Helens Armed Forces Day which involves a packed programme of entertainment.

The free event - organised by St Helens Borough Council - returns for the first time since 2019 and features a parade; 69-field gun WWII artillery display; performances from 103 Regiment Royal Artillery Pipe and Drum and Royal Marine Association Corps of Drum - as well as an exhibition and memorial to commemorate the Falkland's 40th anniversary.

Other attractions on the day include current and vintage military vehicles; stalls; funfair; Classic Cars, as well as variety of performers at the Bandstand, including The Golden Age Songbird, and music service ensembles.

There will also be a competition to find a Victoria Sponge cake fit for The Queen. It needs to include 2 layers of sponge with red jam in the middle and just a light dusting of caster or icing sugar on the top. The cakes will be judged by the Mayor and there are prizes to be won. Get baking!

Encouraging the public to come out in force to support our local servicepeople, St Helens Borough Council's Armed Forces Champion, Councillor Lynn Clarke said:

"Throughout history, our borough has been - and still is - home to some truly remarkable figures who have served their country impeccably in various conflicts; from the St Helens Pals of the First World War to Colonel Andy Reid whose work with veterans and people with disabilities has been recognised at a national level.

"This day is about showing our appreciation to people like them who have given their all for our freedom and safety - and salute the fantastic local organisations that provide vital support for veterans and their families.

"It's the first time we've been able to hold an event for Armed Forces Day since the start of Covid, so this year's event will be extra special, especially given the role the Armed Forces have played in pandemic, such as setting up hospitals and mass testing sites.

"If the weather is like anything we've had previously - it's sure to be a great day."

Commenting on the importance of celebrating Armed Forces Day, John Burns, Chair of the local Royal British Legion branch, said:

"Being part of the Armed Forces is a lot more than just fighting in wars - its dealing with emergencies like flooding, power outages and of course, supporting the NHS in times of crisis like we've seen during the coronavirus pandemic - so Armed Forces Day is a chance for the public to come out and thank the forces for what they've done and to look at the future.

"There's a lot to be thankful for and a lot to look forward to."

St Helens Armed Forces Day will take place from 11:00am to 4:00pm on Saturday 18 June.

In 2012, St Helens Borough Council signed the Armed Forces Covenant and works closely with local regiments, charities, health, housing, education, and employment partners to ensure the Armed Forces community receive the support and recognition they are entitled to.
